At The Theaters Next Week

Keith's Theater.

Two stellar attractions, two extra added features and six other offerings will lend unusual drawing power to the B. F. Keith Theater bill next week. Points and Low Hearn, from the Lee Fields staff of celebrities of musical comedy, head the stars in their tuneful and volatile novelty, "Bits of Musical Comedy." It will be their premiere here. Another starliner introduction will be Marion Weeks, the coloratura soprano, who, though still in her teens, has won a high degree of fame by her extraordinary rendition of the doll song from "The Tales of Hoffmann." The new and strange futurist art will be exploited in "Le Cafe Futuriste," by Mlle. Destree, a Parisian artist loaned to Keith vaudeville by Manager Charles Dillingham. Heading this production will be Gene Hodgekins. Both players also will make their premiere here. The fourth to debut will be Will J. Ward and his musical girls in a spirited and spectacular production.

The remainder of the bill will be composed of all-new acts, including Solly Ward and Lillian Fitzgerald in "Southeastern," by Mlle. Destree, the Stan Stanley company offering, "The Bouncing Fellow," Sam H. White and Lou Clayton in "The Different Dances," and the city Clintons in their leaping feats; the pipe organ recitals, and the Pathe news pictorial.

Next Sunday the vaudeville concerts at 2 and 8:15 p. m. at Keith's will present Emma Carus, Swan Wood, Henshaw and Avery and the other current week attractions.

Follies—"The Miracle Man."

George M. Cohan's greatest dramatic success, "The Miracle Man," which enjoyed a long run at the Astor Theater, New York, last season, will be the important offering of the Follies Players next week.

The story is one of intense dramatic interest, centering in the efforts of four "sharps" to make capital of the supposed faith-healing powers of a venerable patriarch of the Maine woods. The scheme is fostered by one Madison, a shrewd "get-rich-quick" individual, who has as his lieutenants a fakir, who poses as an incurable cripple, a dope fiend, and a young girl whose Madison is in love. The girl's part in the scheme is to pose as a long-lost niece of the patriarch, while the fakir is to be "cured" in the presence of a large crowd, thus giving advertising to the powers of the patriarch.

The scheme works admirably at first, the money pouring in on Madison, but the latter had calculated without taking into consideration the real spiritual power of the patriarch, and in the end the leader's three confederates in crime desert him and go over to the camp of the patriarch. How Madison himself is won over eventually to see the truth and the power of the patriarch constitutes the dramatic climax of the play.

Albert Roscoe, who has been as the arch-schemer, while Robert Lowe will play the patriarch and Katherine La Salle will enact the role of Helene, played originally in New York by Gail Kane.

Cosmos.

An all-new bill will be presented at the Cosmos Theater the last half of this week, beginning with the Thursday matinee. It will be composed of "Comical Kops," a company of strenuous farceurs of the clown type. In an offering patterned after the famous "Krysville" review, the new bill will be a laughable oddities of summer vaudeville. It is said to be breezy and mer-ry.

Selected by fraternal, social and church organizations as the ideal place for a day's outing, Marshall Hall, rich in historic associations as the home of Chief Justice John Marshall, continues to draw every day and numerous outings scheduled promise a big attendance for the next few days. For the benefit of Sunday visitors a series of concerts afternoon and night by the entire Mills' orchestra is promised. This is the first appearance this season in concert of the orchestra, which has been the subject of the biggest drawing cards of the resort.

Kallipolis Grotto

AT CAMP GOOD WILL

Members Give the Children Baseballs, Bats, Sand Buckets and Many Other Playthings.

More than 100 members of Kallipolis Grotto went to Camp Good Will in Rock Creek Park yesterday to treat the 150 children of the grotto to a picnic.

It was a great event for the children. They were given baseballs, bats, and candy and peanuts. The visit was directed by P. R. Pullman, past monarch of the Grotto. Maj. Raymond Pullman was the guest of honor, as was Mrs. Edwin Sefton, in charge of the "Baby Fan" campaign.

The "buy a breeze" for the babies' movement starts today. Some 15 girls will vend fans on the streets. No minimum price has been affixed for the fans. The campaign will be conducted over today and tomorrow.

WILL NAME GUARD CAMP SITE.

Maj. Castner Expects Selection Within Week.

Selection of a site for the annual encampment of the District Junior Guard will be made within a week, it was announced last night by Maj. Joseph C. Castner, U. S. A. Maj. Castner spent yesterday looking for a site on the Chesapeake Beach, one of the sites under consideration.

Other nearby resorts being considered as likely sites for the camp are Harpers Ferry, Virginia Beach, and Colonial Beach. The citizen-soldiers will leave for the camp about the middle of August.

WORK ON FISCAL

BRIEF NEAR END

Executive Committee of Citizens' Body Practically Completes Task.

MASS OF FACTS GIVEN

Document, to Be Filed by August 1, Will Not Be Made Public Until September 15.

At the meeting of the executive committee of the Joint Citizens' Committee on the fiscal relations between the United States and the District of Columbia held at the offices of its chairman, Henry B. F. Macfarland, last night, the work on the brief to be filed with the Joint Select Committee of Congress by August 1 was practically completed, although some additional work is yet to be done.

The executive committee, after completing the brief, will proceed with the preparations for presenting the facts in detail at the oral hearings in September. By that time the executive committee will have a full report from the subcommittee on assessment and taxation, John Joy Edson, chairman, and Thomas Bradley, secretary, and one from the assessors of the District of Columbia through the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, which will supplement the comparative statistics of the assessment and taxation of American cities having over 30,000 population in the United States in 1913, provided by the United States Census Bureau.

To Co-operate in Tabulation.

Mr. Edson has arranged that Mr. Bradley, secretary of the committee, shall give practically his whole time to the tabulation of the statistics. He is to be completed by September 1. A. M. Fisher, statistical reporter of the Joint Citizens' Committee, will cooperate in the tabulation of the statistics. Mr. Edson's committee in Washington and to a number of other cities.

The Finance Committee Reported to the Executive Committee Last Night.

The finance committee reported to the executive committee last night that contributions to the fund for the necessary statistical and other expert and office expenses of the Joint Citizens' Committee.

OPIUM TRAFFIC COMPROMISE.

Drug to Be Imported Into China as Medicine, Specially Labeled.

A compromise in the Chinese opposition to the opium trade, under which 1,000 chests of opium, the total stock now in Hongkong and Shanghai, may be imported into the provinces of Kiangsu, Kwangtung, and Kiangsi, bearing special labels, was said in unofficial advice that reached the State Department by mail yesterday.

The 1,000 chests may be imported, on payment of duty of $200,000 to the Chinese government for the whole quantity, in lieu of permitting foreign merchants to import into China 12,000 chests of opium this year and 6,000 chests next year, as provided by the British treaty.

This arrangement is understood by officials here to be possibly the result of an understanding with the British authorities with a view to relieving the merchants in the treaty port of Hongkong and the British port of Hongkong of the burden of keeping the immense stock of opium, whose production and sale for commercial purposes is prohibited in China.

MIDDIE'S FATHER KILLED.

Munitions Worker Victim of Boiler Explosion at Jeffersontown, Ky.

Annapolis, Md., July 14.—Midshipman James E. Waddell, of Illinois, member of the second class, one of the defendants in the going inquiry at the Naval Academy, today received a telegram, announcing the death of his father, killed yesterday by a boiler explosion at the Du Pont Powder Company's plant at Jeffersontown, Ky., where munitions are being made for the allies.

Waddell is the son of a wealthy merchant who was dragged into the going mess after the court was convened.

Panama Fever Causes Suicide.

New York, July 14.—A man who had been contracted while engaged in work on the Panama Canal, for which he was accorded a medal he wore at the time of his death, John J. Keegan, shot and killed himself at Williamsburg today. Keegan had considerable money and jewelry and a carefully balanced statement from a trust company with which he had invested his estate. He disappeared from home Monday and took up his abode at the hotel in which he ended his life.

WHEN A MAN IS MARRIED

BY ONE WHO IS GETTING BACK AT MYRA

(Copyright, 1915.)
Something must be done to choke off the woman's page lore which is finding its way into the newspapers. This is imperative. As a matter of fact, our constitutional rights as husbands ought to be called a national strike or something.
The peace and quiet of our household were knocked to smithereens when Myra read from the typewriter of a woman author in one of our daily papers the following:
"Real husbands, like real terrapin, once so plentiful in this country that even the poor could afford to indulge in them every day, have now become so scarce that they are a luxury of the rich."
"Myra," I said, in carefully pointed tones, "do you believe that?"
"Why not?" she was as calm as "The Epicurean Episode," the excerpt from which she had just read.
"I am astonished!" I exclaimed. "I didn't suppose you would take any stock in it."
"Well," she replied meditatively, "it does contain much truth, doesn't it? And, besides, it is written by a woman who knows."
"Truth nothing," I blared. "On the contrary, there's gross misstatement of fact in it. What else does the writer suggest?"
Myra bent to the paper eagerly. "Why, she suggests several recipes for what she calls Mock Husband—the methods of preparing them, you know."
"And so we who don't belong to the rich are of the mock kind," I said, biting the sarcasm off in choppy chunks.
"I guess that's about the size of it, Robert," and Myra laughed.
Right here was the chance I had been looking for. So I said:
"Well, Myra, if that is the rule with reference to husbands, why can't it be reversed? Suppose we say that the real wives in the world are so scarce that they are a luxury of the rich? It's a fact, too, as can easily be demonstrated. Why?"
"Robert, you are going entirely too far. You know I didn't mean—"
"Yes, you did. You believe what these women writers say about us poor husbands and now I'm going to tell you what the greatest men writers think about wives. They claim that the real, simon-pure wife, the kind that husbands continue ding-bang over for the whole of their lives, are as scarce as hen's molars. The so-called modern wife, they say, is entirely too selfish in the little things, too much given to the frivolities of existence. She obeys an impulse she believes to be love in marrying a man, and then makes his life miserable for him ever afterward. Myra, that is the consensus of opinion of the greatest writers. I could quote author after author, but I don't." Myra was almost at white heat.
"I'll do no such thing," I returned. "It's my inlying now. Mrs. Hetherington, and you've got to hear a man's opinion about the things you are being fed by women writers. Perhaps it will be some good. Too long have we down-trodden husbands of this star-spangled-banner republic been silent under the jibes and jeers of the woman's age. Too long have we permitted Dorothy Dix and Helen Rowland and Ella Wheeler Wilcox to toss the arrows of discontent against the citadels of our homes. It is time to rebel!"
"Enough, enough! I pray you, Robert, enough!" Myra was sobbing under the strain of my arraignment. I saw that it was indeed time to stop.
An hour or so later all traces of carnage had vanished. Myra was first to promote the bonfire of husbandry.
"Robert," she smiled, "I don't believe that real husbands are a luxury of the rich."
"And I don't believe that real wives are as scarce as hen's molars," I could afford to be magnanimous.

Sketcher of Little
LD NEW YORK

(Special correspondent of The Herald.)
New York, July 14.—A new luncheon club has opened in the financial district. Just a little luncheon club, you understand, which takes in the three upper floors of the Equitable Building at 130 Broadway and the equipment of which cost merely $50,000.
It is called the Bankers' Club of America, with a board of governors who are trustees for more than two thousand million dollars. The club being a baby just now has only about 200 members.
One of the features is the telephone room de luxe. This looks out over both rivers and the bay and is filled with easy chairs, desks with maps and data, and besides the open telephones, has telephone booths fitted with soft leather armchairs.
There are also little private dining-rooms and a few other little comforts for the tired business men—poor devils!

The garrulous little Sam Scheppe, who flitted to Paris and back again, while he was a much wanted witness in the Becker-Rosenthal gambling murder, has come back to Broadway and is now the proprietor of a jewelry store and pawn shop in the heart of the district where Becker formerly held full sway.
A big sign, electrically lighted, projects out over the sidewalk, reading "Sam Scheppe, Jeweler." His store is at the intersection of Seventh avenue and Broadway, and he declares that he has started off with a flourishing business. Jack Rose, the baldheaded gambler, and Bridge Webber are seen in Scheppe's place from time to time. Webber has opened up a box factory in Newark and is employing over 400 persons.

The licensed porters about the big railroad stations have been reaping a harvest of late by misleading unsuspecting visitors when they arrive. In addition to the tips they secure a percentage by guiding the new arrivals to certain hotels.

The hotel men got together the other day and sent a detective and a woman assistant to Hoboken to take the ferry back to New York. They engaged a porter and told him to take them to a big well-known hotel.

The porter told them that he had been sent down by the management of the hotel to warn prospective guests that the hotel was filled with a convention crowd. He then took them to a small hotel in a side street. In some cases the porters have told visitors that certain hotels were under quarantine.

Warden Thomas Mott Osborne, of Sing Sing, is hoisting a stubborn row. For his kindness he may lose his job. When he took the job he accorded the convicts a large measure of self-government and greater freedom of movement. He put them on their honor not to jump over the prison wall and within a month two have been recaptured to this trust. In the meantime Superintendent Riley, somewhat contemptuous of the Osborne regime at Sing Sing, has been doing a little hoisting of his own account, and many predict that Osborne will soon be beheaded.

How cruel New Yorkers are! One was heard to say to a news stand dealer the other day: "Gimme a newspaper. Is the Giants-loss edition out yet?"

On Montgomery street in Jersey City there is a sign "Stalio, the Tailor." Roy McCordell wonders if anybody ever has.

The famous old Saratoga Club house has been reopened and is of the same brilliance and gaiety as when Richard Catfield was in power there.

DEFENSES OF COUNTRY
SHOWN IN "MOVIES"

Every Branch of Army and Navy Portrayed on Roof of National Press Club.

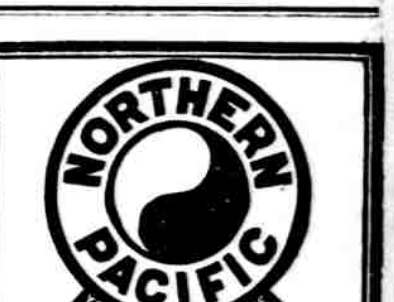

Every branch of the army and navy, representing the national defenses of the United States, were shown in motion pictures on the roof of the National Press Club last night, due to the courtesy of F. O. Nelson, of Chicago, who has spent seven months in making 3,000 feet of excellent films. W. H. Rudolph is Mr. Nelson's manager.
The production is called "Guarding Old Glory" and the members of the club and their friends, had the pleasure of witnessing its first public presentation. Secretaries Garrison and Daniels and Maj. Macomber, president of the Army War College, took part, further consideration was given the military policy which will be submitted to Congress at the forthcoming session.
Secretary Garrison desires to increase the size of the mobile army, enlarge the coast artillery, and establish a system of reserves. Leonard Wood was the only person to see those pictures before they were shown on the screen at the club.
From aeroplanes to artillery, and from submarines to huge super-dreadnoughts, the workings of the country's land and naval defenses were shown.

BIGGER U. S. ARMY PLANNED.

Secretary Garrison Confers with Aids on Military Reorganization.

At a conference at the Army and Navy Club last night, in which Secretary of War Garrison, Gen. Scott, chief of staff; Gen. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, and Maj. Macomber, president of the Army War College, took part, further consideration was given the military policy which will be submitted to Congress at the forthcoming session.
